PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SIGNS

till, singned by President Roosevert. Thus aspirants for homesteads who care to brave arid districts and attempt to traise crops, without irrigation, now apply for double the amount of land at lotted homesteaders, where irrigation is possible, or rainfall is plentiful. The bill gives to qualified entryment under the homestead laws the right to take up 320 acres of non-mineral, non-irrigable public land. The land must not be a remerchantable timber and not be ar merchantable timber and must be in a reasonable compact body not more than one and one-half miles in length.

This law is to apply only in Colorado. Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Wash-ington, Wyoming, Arizona and New Mexico.

The measure expressly provides that only those whose homestead right has not been used may take up these 320 acre farms. The original bill provided that any pioneer of the prairies might increare his farm to 320 acres by taking up the dry land, but the provision was stricken out. There is a clause though which permits a farmer who is living on a 160 acre homestead of non-irrigable land on which final proof has not been made to increase his holdings to 320 acres of that class of land.

The new law makes exceptions in

The new law makes exceptions in Utah by providing that entrymen need tan by providing that entrymen need not necessarily live on the lands to make tinal proof, but within such distance as will enable them to farm it successfully. Not to exceed 2,000,000 acres of this close of land is to be subject to entry in 1 tah.

At the time of final proof on the new
